Budget DVD Player With Bells And Whistles

By Mike Wheeler | Thursday | 31/07/2008

Harman Kardon claims it has produced a DVD player that covers all a users needs including HDMI 1.2a output and 1080p upscaling.

The DVD 39 features progressive scan DVD playback and plays back compressed audio files (MP3, WMA) burnt on CDs or DVDs. It is DivX ultracompatible and can also display JPEG image files.

A text-based user menu and an integrated test screen helps the user find and save the colour setting for the connected TV or monitor.

The possibility of upgrading the software makes this unit future-proof, claims

Harman Kardon. All non-essential buttons have been eliminated from the stylishly designed front panel.

The polished Harman Kardon logo on brushed aluminium is a visual indication that the owner has purchased technology of the highest standard.
